8-10, P.M.

My Dearest:—

Do you object to me talking to you just a little, before I go to sleep?—

I wonder, if you are coming, Saturday how I wish I knew. Girls are, after all, such dependant creatures, just have to wait and see, but boys have to go and see and then they always do not find things just as they would like to have them, — therefore guess it is "just about as broad as it's long."

"I am tired to night, and I miss you, And long for you Love, through tears. Will I see you Saturday I wonder? Will we have a moment together and feel free to open our hearts to each other?"

Darling I could just quote your letter of Sunday, to me and express my own heart best - but you know what you wrote, and also know your own heart. There fore mine - therefore two in one. see, Dearest. -

I have been sewing today, since eleven-thirty, until dusk, and since supper have been making out Post Office reports etc. Darling, "Callaway" will "miss me when I'm gone" - but it's nice to be missed, for then it is that you are appreciated, (if ever before!).

Yes, and I went over to Sisters too, just a few minits this P.M., ate up every thing I could find, & thumped the piano a little.

Oh, - Dearest, I feel so "some how" about you going away. I'm not very superstitious but still Oh, well, I'll be so lonesome, and how and on what can I fill up the P.D.A. dept. of the Pilot with? You got here to see and arrange what I wrote, if I had heart to write anything. guess I'll just scratch up something and mail it, for eight miles is entirely is far to go, just to carry "copy".

Well, dearest, if I were to think much about the, "what I'll do while you are away", proposition I'd take a terrible case of the "lonely blues" - and you don't like for me to have "them", therefore, ^{with} heart and soul full of warm love, to kiss ^{and} - Good night.

Yours,
Lillian.

Dearest I received a long letter from Mrs. Dyer this a.m. very inductive I suppose, will show you Saturday -
